

Italian metalworkers (FIOM) and public service unions (FP-CGIL) plan joint strike on 13 February

The CGIL metalworking federation (FIOM CGIL) and FP public service (FP CGIL) are coming together in protest at a range of government policies attacking public sector workers, public services and undermining progress towards equality, not just between men and women workers but also between domestic and migrant workers. The Berlusconi government policies are weakening workers' rights in both public and private sectors.

On Friday 13th February, three separate marches starting out from different parts of Rome will all congregate in the Piazza San Giovanni.

The federations have set up a website together that is part of their organising campaign to build for a national strike in their sectors on 13 February <http://www.unitanticrisi.it/>.

See also the unions' websites www.fpcgil.it and www.fiom.cgil.it/